

ME NEWS ENTERTAINMENT LIFESTYLE MONEY HEALTH SPORT T

All News | US News | World News | UK News

EXCLUSIVE

News > US News

'STUNNING ADMISSION' Pentagon admits it has been testing wreckage from UFO crashes & findings may 'change our lives forever,' expert says

Emma Parry

6:33 ET, Feb 13 2021 | Updated: 19:30 ET, Feb 16 2021

THE Pentagon has admitted to holding and testing wreckage from UFO crashes in a bombshell Freedom of Information letter, shared with The Sun.

Researcher Anthony Bragalia wrote to the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) requesting details of all UFO material, which they hold and results of any tests they had been carrying out on it.

The Pentagon has admitted testing UFO material Credit: Getty Images - Getty

He wrote: "This could include physical debris recovered by personnel of the Department of Defense as residue, flotsam, shot-off material or crashed material from UAPS [unidentified aerial phenomenon] or unidentified flying objects."

In the response, shared with The Sun, the DIA released 154 pages of test results that includes reports on a mysterious "memory" metal called Nitinol, which remembers its original shape when folded.

Bragalia said it was a "stunning admission" from the US government and the documents reveal that some of the retrieved debris possesses "extraordinary capabilities" including the potential to make things invisible or even slow down the speed of light. He told The Sun: "The Pentagon has admitted to holding and testing anomalous debris from UFOs.

Bragalia's original FOIA request Credit: Department of Defense/ Anthony Bragalia

Here is the official response from the Defense Intelligence Agency

Credit: Department of Defense/ Anthony Bragalia

"They have been able to learn some things about the materials of construction which hold tremendous promise as futuristic materials which will change our lives forever."

He said he first made the request in 2017 - which took three years for the DIA to fulfill - after it was revealed the Pentagon had been studying UFOs under the Advanced Aerospace Threat Identification Program (AATIP).

"The article mentioned that anomalous debris from UFOs (now called UAPs) was being analyzed by a private defense contractor," Bragalia said.

"Material evidence such as UFO debris has been a focus of my research.

"My Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request was very specific, seeking the test results of UFO/UAP debris, not material already known to science."

Bragalia believes some of the debris being tested may be from this incident

Bragalia believes some of the material that is being tested could have come from the notorious Roswell incident of 1947, in which a UFO crashed in New Mexico.

"The inclusion of advanced technical reports on Nitinol is curious," Bragalia said.

"Nitinol is a shape-memory alloy that 'remembers' its original shape when folded or crunched, and snaps back seamlessly and instantly.

"This memory metal characteristic was reported by many witnesses at Roswell."

The site of the Roswell crash Credit: Reuters

The Pentagon has not disclosed the origins of the UFO material

Credit: Getty Images - Getty

However the agency has held back certain details about the materials - including any information about they could be of alien origin - stating in the letter: "I have determined that some portions of five documents must be withheld in part from disclosure..."

"They are omitting information on the chemical and elemental composition of the material as well as its origin," Bragalia said.

"They have omitted the names of the involved scientists as well, but I have since learned some of their names and will be contacting them."

The DIA letter, first shared on Bragalia's blog, reveals that the testing was carried out by Bigelow Aerospace, one of the Department of Defense's private contractors based in Las Vegas, Nevada.

The DIA released 154 pages of testing results Credit: Department of Defense/ Anthony Bragalia

Bragalia said the results of the tests could be life changing

Credit: Department of Defense/ Anthony Bragalia

The company laid off all of its staff at the Vegas plant last March due to the toll of the pandemic - and it's not known where the UFO material may now be kept.

Mysteriously Bragalia said everyone he approached who used to work at the plant refused to comment to him.

"All former personnel have refused me any real comment," he said.

"I suspect the material has been returned to the Pentagon."

MOST READ IN NEWS

MY TRUTH Joe Rogan's dad denies claims of violence & wants to reunite with podcast star

WHERE IS SHE? Husband reveals where missing teacher was going before mystery disappearance

COLD CASE CONVICTION Student's killer sentenced for brutal rape & murder of 20-year-old

FAMILY'S HORROR District attorney's daughter arrested for 'STABBING her dad multiple times'

The UFO researcher is planning to launch an appeal to obtain some of the redacted information in the coming months.

The Sun reached out to the DIA for comment.

CIA expert probing 'code-filled' diary of first man at Roswell crash site which could unlock 75-year-old UFO mystery

Topics

Aliens And UFOs

YOU MIGHT LIKE

SERVICES

FOLLOW THE SUN

Sign Up To The Sun | About Us |

A

Editorial Complaints

Clarifications and Corrections

News Licensing | Advertising |

Contact Us | Help Hub | Topic A-Z |

Cookie Settings | Contact Preferences

© 2020 THE SUN, US, INC. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED | TERMS OF USE | PRIVACY | YOUR AD CHOICES | SITEMAP.